CASA was created in response to the human needs of the thousands of Central Americans arriving to the D.C. area after fleeing wars and civil strife in their countries of origin. In the basement of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, CASA provided emergency clothing, food, immigration assistance, and English instruction to new immigrant arrivals from Central America. Today, CASA has programs in employment placement, vocational training, financial literacy, job development, ESOL instruction, Spanish literacy, citizenship classes, legal services, health outreach and education, health information services, social services, and community organizing and advocacy. CASA caters its programs to three main constituencies: low income women, workers, and tenants. CASA offers internship opportunities to students for professional growth and, in certain circumstances, academic credit:         Baltimore Workers Employment Center         2224 East Fayette Street         Baltimore, MD 21231         Telephone 410-732-2694         Fax: 410-732-2692 |

By offering essential educational opportunities, vocational training, and counseling, CCYD strives to be a first-class learning facility and social service organization that will set new standards of success and achievement for disadvantaged youth. Our programs foster the personal development and positive human relationships necessary for living a socially responsible and personally satisfying life. In fulfilling our mission we focus on a child's strengths and assets, and encourage the youth to set achievable goals for themselves, both educationally and in their personal lives. Then we work to help them realize those goals. Our own four organizational objectives provide core programmatic direction: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li><input type="checkbox"/> To help youth build strong developmental assets</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> To prevent the onset or recurrence of delinquency.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> To help students attain educational milestones.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> To empower and prepare youth for self-sufficiency.</li> </ul> |

They are assigned to six geographic areas of the city and are tasked with building relationships with community leaders and constituents. Liaisons regularly attend community association meetings to listen and respond to neighborhood concerns that can be addressed through city services and resources. Liaisons routinely participate in community events and activities on behalf of the Mayor to provide resource information and connect residents to their local government.
