

MLA Bibliography

MLA Bibliography provides some one million citations for items from over 4,000 journals and series published worldwide. It indexes books, essay collections, working papers, proceedings, dissertations, and bibliographies. Each record contains a bibliographic citation for a journal article, book, or other item. The database covers 1963 to the present. To access MLA Bibliography:

- Go to the Library homepage (www.loyola.edu/library).
- Click on English/Literature from the "Resources by Subject" box on the left-hand side of the page.
- Click on the MLA Bibliography link.
- The search screen is set to "default fields" as the default parameter for searches. To do a different kind of search, such as Title or Subject, click on the appropriate link in the menu bars on the rightmost fields.
- Note: In the Author Search mode, searches are for articles by an author, not articles about an author.
- To view the full record of a specific item from your list of results, click on the linked title.
- Print or Email using the icons at the top of the page (only visible once you've clicked on a specific item).
- While there are some full-text articles in the MLA Bibliography, the MLA Bibliography mainly contains citations. For more on how to find the full text of an article, please read Where's the Article?
