

LOYOLA
UNIVERSITY MARYLAND

Master of Science/PHD in Pastoral Counseling

The M.S.-Ph.D. combination program was developed to address the needs of highly competent candidates who are seeking the opportunity to pursue the Ph.D. without having first obtained a master's degree in counseling. The accelerated program may be completed in four to five years by highly motivated candidates willing to commit at least two days per week including summers. Others may wish to take longer than five years to complete the full program.

Upon admission, each student's transcripts are reviewed to determine if theology course waivers are possible. Students applying to the program with a recent graduate degree in theology may be granted a waiver for both PC608 and PC665. Students with prior graduate-level coursework in theology/spirituality may be granted a waiver for PC608 and/or PC665. This waiver is dependent upon the nature of the prior coursework completed, and at the rate of three graduate credits for a three-credit course successfully completed with a B or better.

Program of Study

The typical program of study consists of five years of full-time coursework and clinical training. The following coursework is required in order to obtain the Master of Science (M.S.) portion of the M.S.-Ph.D.:

Transition into the Ph.D. Program

Candidates typically transition into their doctoral coursework prior to conferment of the master's degree. Students should consult with their doctoral program mentor and review the M.S.-Ph.D. typical program guides in order to sequence their courses appropriately. The M.S. is conferred upon successful completion of all required coursework and clinical requirements for the MS degree. Candidates complete all required coursework for the Ph.D. program as outlined.

Throughout the course of study, candidates are challenged to integrate their theological and religious perspectives with clinical theory and practice and to articulate their personal, vocational, and pastoral identity. In keeping with the goals of the program, the Ph.D. curricular requirements involve five major areas: theory and practice of counseling; statistics and research design; clinical case conferences; training in supervision and education; and spiritual studies and integrative seminars. In addition to traditional academic courses, the Ph.D. program involves a clinical internship experience of no less than 600 hours (in addition to the Master's level internship) that includes on-site clinical experience and supervision in one or several agencies.

The dissertation process at Loyola emphasizes faculty support of the candidate as an emerging peer and colleague in research. Candidates are encouraged to choose a project which is meaningful to them and will enhance their personal preparation for their chosen work after the Ph.D.

Dissertation

The doctoral program requires that the student's advanced theory course, PC700, PC753, PC754, PC897, PC898, PC901, PC902, PC914, and PC915 or PC916 be completed with a grade of B or better prior to taking the qualifying examination. If a grade of B or better is not achieved in each of these courses, additional coursework will be required in the subject area needing remediation before a student will be granted permission to take the qualifying exam.

After successful completion of the qualification examination, candidates may begin doctoral dissertation planning and register for Doctoral Research Supervision (PC960). Candidates may be taking other academic/clinical courses during this time. Candidates officially begin work on the dissertation when Dissertation Guidance (PC990) is taken, during which they complete and defend the dissertation proposal, perform data analysis, and prepare a dissertation defense. The earliest a proposal defense can be scheduled is the semester in which all coursework will be completed. Candidates are admitted into All But Dissertation (ABD) status when they have completed all of their academic, clinical, and research courses and have passed the qualifying examination.
