Research & Instruction Librarian

The Loyola • Notre Dame Library is seeking a Research & Instruction librarian to join our team. The successful candidate will have a passion for teaching, be excited about health and natural sciences reference and instruction, and have a desire and the ability to work in a team-based environment.

The successful candidate will:

- Initiate and conduct course-related information literacy instruction in the health and natural sciences, as well as provide general undergraduate information literacy education.
- Incorporate new approaches and technologies into existing and future research & instruction services by building upon current services.
- Work closely with liaisons to seek partnerships with faculty and students in the health and natural sciences at LUM and NDM.
- Provide general reference as well as subject specific research support in the health, life and natural sciences, and related disciplines.
- Act as a liaison to one or more departments, performing collection development and outreach to faculty.
- Participate in other departmental and library-wide initiatives.

Required Qualifications:
The ideal candidate will have an ALA-accredited master’s degree, strong interpersonal communication skills and a passion for working with students and faculty. The candidate should have experience working within health or natural sciences. Two or more years of instruction experience. Familiarity with current trends in instructional best practices. Ability to work effectively in collegial environments and to adjust to the changing needs within the Library, the Universities and the profession. Ability to work evenings and weekends.

Preferred Qualifications:
Undergraduate or graduate degree in the life sciences or a related health discipline, or experience as a medical, health sciences, or life sciences librarian. Experience in working with faculty to develop data-management plans.
