Introduction

As a collective Loyola community, we are journeying an uncharted and seemingly uncertain path. While we have our individual steps, we collectively travel through transition, trials and triumph. Regardless of where you are and the distance between us, the Counseling Center wants to remind you that care and support are only a step away. We are reaching out to provide you a (virtual) point of connection combining basic wellness strategies, coping skills, resources for dealing with loss, and tips to find meaning and motivation along the way.

Take care and Be Well Greyhounds!
Is your sleep schedule irregular? Are you sleeping more than you want to be? Are you having trouble falling asleep? If the answer to any of these questions is "yes," you may benefit from these sleep tips and additional resources from the Counseling Center's Getting Good Sleep resource page.

Day Structure
Without the usual structure of classes, extracurriculars, and work, it may seem like your days are all blending together! These apps can help you bring back a sense of rhythm through developing your own schedule and desirable habits.

Eating and Nutrition
For tips, guidelines, and health information, see information from Loyola Dining or the list of tips and advice about nutrition during strength and conditioning training.

Exercise
Visit Loyola Recreation and Wellness or Loyola Group Exercise on Instagram to find workout options you can do at home!

POPSUGAR Fitness offers a variety of workouts, like HIIT, barre, cardio dance and more. Yoga with Adriene has a number of different yoga sessions. Both are free options, and all you need is a computer and a place to start moving.
Connection

Five ways to build stronger connections

01 Write a letter
02 Pick up the phone and call
03 Ask meaningful questions
04 Answer questions with honesty
05 Connect via video

Why Connect?

- To decrease loneliness, stress, depression, and anxiety
- To acknowledge collective trauma and experience solidarity
- To experiencing love and belonging
- To give and receive care and compassion

Connecting with Self

Connecting with others is important, but sometimes we need to recharge on our own or remove ourselves from unhealthy interactions. Here are some tips for connecting with yourself and protecting your personal boundaries.

1. Limit social media use, particularly if you find yourself consuming content that impacts you negatively.
2. Write. Describe your thoughts and feelings. Keep a gratitude journal.
3. Connect with your body through yoga, dance, and staying active.
5. Do more of what you love and feel good at. Alternatively, try or learn something new.
6. If you have little privacy at home and desire it, intentionally take advantage of any alone time (e.g., take long showers, take “fresh air breaks" outside, linger at an empty aisle at the store).

Distraction
Sometimes we need a break to focus on other things when we are feeling overwhelmed. Some ideas include: Games, books/magazines, TV, podcasts, puzzles, and cleaning.

Challenge Your Thoughts
Struggling with critical thoughts or hopeless worries? Consider trying the "Triple R Exercise" or Thought Defusion techniques.

  - Comforting smells

- Taste
  - Strong flavors
  - Warm drinks
  - Nostalgic flavors

Grounding
Grounding strategies can help us get in touch with our bodies and surroundings in the present moment. Pause what you are doing and pay attention to what you can see, hear, smell, and touch in your environment. Try a mindful eating exercise or walk around barefoot at home and pay close attention to how every step feels.

This Youtube channel offers introductory videos to mindfulness and guided meditations.

Dealing with Loss & Uncertainty

Given that COVID-19 affects all of our day-to-day lives, comfort can be found in knowing that we are all experiencing some level of loss and uncertainty. That said, we all may respond and handle it differently. We want you to know that there is no “one way” to grieve or one “right way” to feel. 💙❤️💙

Consider practicing self-compassion as you work through losses and changing circumstances. Try some of these exercises compiled by Dr. Kristin Neff, a renowned researcher of self-compassion.

Activism, service, and generosity are a few ways to promote one’s sense of empowerment and contribution when we may be feeling helpless. Here are a few ideas.

At some point on your journey, you may find it helpful to consider the unique opportunities for growth or possible “silver linings” during this time. Consider documenting them in some way so that you can reflect on them later.

Goal Setting
Sometimes when we are feeling stuck, we need something ahead of us to work toward. Goals can help us focus our energy and create a sense of purpose. When generating goals, think about your needs, abilities, and values. Setting SMART Goals is one way to achieve realistic goals within a specified time frame. See the next page for a SMART Goals worksheet!

It can also be helpful to think about potential obstacles you might face while working towards your goals and plan for how to address them (e.g., if your phone is a big distraction, you can plan to keep your phone in another room or on silent while you are trying to work on a meditation goal).

Connect with your Values
Identifying what is important to us can be one way to foster motivation. Try one of the values card sorts below and then consider how you can express your values on a daily basis.
- Online values card sort

Lean on your Strengths
Knowing your strengths can help you address problems more effectively and engage in activities that generate confidence and purpose. Try taking the VIA Character Strengths Survey to identify your strongest traits.

Wholeness
Think about what makes you feel whole, grounded, or like you. It can be helpful to consider Maslow’s Hierarchy of Needs.

We asked CC staff how they are finding meaning and motivation during this time. Here are the responses in a word cloud!
